Regulations

8 CFR § 241 4, 6, 10, 11

Plaintiffs use the same numbering system as Defendant's brief to address the allegations in Defendant's motion for ease of reference.

I. Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

A. Standard of Review

Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1), A "facial attack" on the complaint requires the court merely to look and see if Plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged a basis of subject matter jurisdiction, and the allegations in his complaint are taken as true for the purposes of the motion. Menchaca v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 613 F.2d 507, 511 (5th Cir. 1980). Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), a complaint need only give fair notice of a "plausible" claim and grounds for it. "A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 566 U.S. 662, 678 (2009).

B. Arguments and Authority

1. Standing

No named Plaintiff is currently incarcerated. However, Operation Lone Star (OLS) continues to arrest immigrants and Plaintiffs intend to seek to add incarcerated individuals as plaintiffs and then seek class certification. Thus, Plaintiffs ask to defer any ruling on injunctive or declaratory relief until such time as Plaintiffs seek to add incarcerated individuals to the complaint. "Article III standing does not require the District Court Judges or District Attorney to be the most immediate cause, or even a proximate cause, of Booth's injuries; rather, it requires only that those injuries be "fairly traceable" to the District Court Judges or District Attorney. See League of United Latin Am. Citizens, Dist. 19 v. City of Boerne, 659 F.3d 421, 431 (5th Cir. 2011) ("The causation element does not require a party to establish proximate causation, but only requires that the injury be ‘fairly traceable’ to the defendant.”)” Booth v. Galveston Cnty., 352 F. Supp. 3d 718, 731 (S.D. Tex. 2019). Plaintiffs have pleaded sufficient facts that their injuries are “fairly traceable” to the Defendant.

2. Younger Abstention

In their motion to dismiss, the Defendants request this Court to decline jurisdiction based on the Younger abstention doctrine. The Younger abstention doctrine does not apply to claims for monetary relief. See Saloom v. Tex. Dept. of Family and Child Protective Servs., 578 Fed.Appx. 426, 429 (5th Cir. 2014), but rather only to claims for injunctive¹ and declaratory relief. Three conditions must be met for the doctrine to apply: (1) the dispute must involve an ongoing state judicial proceeding; (2) an important state interest in the subject matter of the proceeding must be implicated; and (3) the state proceeding must afford an adequate opportunity to raise constitutional challenges. Wightman v. Tex. Supreme Court, 84 F.3d 188, 189 (5th Cir. 1996). At the time of the filing of this lawsuit, there was no longer any active state criminal charge pending against Plaintiffs Jesus Guzman-Curipoma, Christian Ruiz-Rodriguez, and Ivan Ruano Nava. Currently, there are no state criminal charges pending against any Plaintiff, except for Erasto Arroyo Barcenas, Melvin Amador Rodas, and Jose Carlos Gomez-Colorado. The Younger abstention should not be applied to any claim brought by a Plaintiff without an “ongoing state judicial proceeding.”

For the second condition of the abstention to be met, the requested relief must implicate an important state interest in the subject matter of the ongoing state judicial proceeding. The ongoing state judicial proceedings raised by the Defendants consist of the criminal prosecutions for criminal trespass under Operation Lone Star. Much of the declaratory and injunctive relief requested would have little, if any, bearing on state criminal charges. Four of the claims for declaratory relief ask this Court to enter a judgment declaring that the refusal to release individuals after they are entitled to release (because of a valid cash bond, personal bond, dismissal, or plea) is a violation of state and federal law. Similarly, four of the claims for injunctive relief ask this Court to order the release of those who are entitled to release. None of these claims ask for, or involve, the release of any individual that the State has any jurisdiction to keep incarcerated, nor do they terminate or preclude any pending or future prosecution. Therefore, the eight claims related to over-detention are not subject to the Younger doctrine.

The rest of the declaratory and injunctive claims involve the process and procedures by which individuals are being arrested and charged for criminal trespass – but do not implicate the facts or circumstances of each individual Plaintiff. For example, in the event this Court enjoins the separate system of arrest and prosecution for immigrants as opposed to other detainees, that would not prevent the State of Texas from prosecuting any criminal trespass charges. Additionally, under the Younger doctrine, a federal district court should not abstain where, as is the case here, the threat to the federal plaintiff's federal rights cannot be eliminated by a defense against a single state criminal prosecution. Younger v. Harris, 401 U.S. 37, 91 S. Ct. 746, 27 L. Ed. 2d 669 (1971)

II. Motion to Dismiss For Alleged Failure To State a Claim

A. Arguments and Authorities

1. Fourth Amendment Violations

“If the police stop someone based on nothing more than possible removability, the usual predicate for an arrest is absent.” Arizona v. United States, 567 U.S. 387, 407, 132 S. Ct. 2492, 2505, 183 L. Ed. 2d 351 (2012). The federal statutory structure instructs when it is appropriate to arrest an alien during the removal process. For example, the Attorney General can exercise discretion to issue a warrant for an alien's arrest and detention “pending a decision on whether the alien is to be removed from the United States.” Arizona v. United States, 567 U.S. 387, 407, 132 S. Ct. 2492, 2505, 183 L. Ed. 2d 351 (2012). And if an alien is ordered removed after a hearing, the Attorney General will issue a warrant. See 8 CFR § 241.2(a)(1). In both instances, the warrants are executed by federal officers who have received training in the enforcement of immigration law. See §§ 241.2(b), 287.5(e)(3).

In the Arizona opinion, the Court examined a section of an Arizona law (Section 6) which attempted to provide state officers even greater authority to arrest aliens on the basis of possible removability than Congress has given to trained federal immigration officers. Under state law, officers who believe an alien is removable by reason of some “public offense” would have the power to conduct an arrest on that basis regardless of whether a federal warrant has issued or the alien is likely to escape. This state authority could be exercised without any input from the Federal Government about whether an arrest is warranted in a particular case. This would allow the State to achieve its own immigration policy. The result could be unnecessary harassment of some aliens (for instance, a veteran, college student, or someone assisting with a criminal investigation) who federal officials determine should not be removed. Arizona, 567 U.S. at 408. “This is not the system Congress created.” Id.

The Fifth Circuit acknowledges that “absent express direction or authorization by federal statute or federal officials, state and local law enforcement officers may not detain or arrest an individual solely based on known or suspected civil violations of federal immigration law,” City of El Cenizo, 890 F.3d at 189. (citing Santos v. Frederick County Board of Commissioners, 725

F.3d 451, 465 (4th Cir. 2013). “Thus, the seizure in Santos violated the Fourth Amendment because the officers detained Santos “before dispatch confirmed with ICE that the warrant was active.” City of El Cenizo, 890 F.3d at 189. The Fifth Circuit cited with approval Meledres v. Arpaio, 695 F.3d 990, 1000 (9th Cir. 2012) for the proposition that unilateral detention “based solely on reasonable suspicion or knowledge that a person was unlawfully present in the United States” was a constitutional violation and noted that in Meledres, “as in Santos, there was no federal request for assistance before the seizure.” 890 F.3d at 189.

It is clear that the OLS process of unilateral detention “based solely on reasonable suspicion or knowledge that a person was unlawfully present in the United States” is a violation of the Fourth Amendment. In the case sub judice: Plaintiff Martinez was “located and detained” as a “migrant.” (emphasis added). He was arrested, along with five others, on the Union Pacific Railway. There were three males and three females. The three female “trespassers” were transported to the Border Patrol Station in Brackettville. The three males were all arrested and sent to the Val Verde Processing Center. Id. The probable cause affidavit for Plaintiff Barcenas states that a state trooper was “notified by DPS SOG of nine migrants trespassing on the Dos Angeles Ranch.” Id. (emphasis added). The probable cause affidavit charging Plaintiff Becerra reflects that that he was also one of the “nine migrants” on the Dos Angeles Ranch. Id., (emphasis added). Plaintiff Santana was also identified as one of the “nine migrants.” The probable cause affidavit charging Plaintiff Rodas with trespass reflects that troopers “had apprehended a group of Undocumented Persons (UDPs)” on a ranch...The defendant was one of the UDP’s in the group.” Id. (emphasis added). Plaintiff Pineda was also identified as one of the Undocumented Persons in the group. Id. The probable cause affidavit charging Plaintiff Colorado with trespassing identifies him as one of two “Illegal Aliens,” stating that the “landowners wished to pursue trespassing charges on the Aliens.”

Id. (emphasis added). “There were two civilians armed with long rifles and two illegal aliens lying prone with their hands on their heads.” Id. (emphasis added). The probable cause affidavits for these Plaintiffs reflect detention and arrest based upon immigration status.

a) No Probable Cause

“If the police stop someone based on nothing more than possible removability, the usual predicate for an arrest is absent.” Arizona v. United States, 567 U.S. 387, 407, 132 S. Ct. 2492, 2505, 183 L. Ed. 2d 351 (2012). The federal statutory structure instructs when it is appropriate to arrest an alien during the removal process. For example, the Attorney General can exercise discretion to issue a warrant for an alien's arrest and detention “pending a decision on whether the alien is to be removed from the United States.” Arizona v. United States, 567 U.S. 387, 407, 132 S. Ct. 2492, 2505, 183 L. Ed. 2d 351 (2012). And if an alien is ordered removed after a hearing, the Attorney General will issue a warrant. See 8 CFR § 241.2(a)(1). In both instances, the warrants are executed by federal officers who have received training in the enforcement of immigration law. See §§ 241.2(b), 287.5(e)(3).

In the Arizona opinion, the Court examined a section of an Arizona law (Section 6) which attempted to provide state officers even greater authority to arrest aliens on the basis of possible removability than Congress has given to trained federal immigration officers. Under state law, officers who believe an alien is removable by reason of some “public offense” would have the power to conduct an arrest on that basis regardless of whether a federal warrant has issued or the alien is likely to escape. This state authority could be exercised without any input from the Federal Government about whether an arrest is warranted in a particular case. This would allow the State to achieve its own immigration policy. The result could be unnecessary harassment of some aliens (for instance, a veteran, college student, or someone assisting with a criminal investigation) who federal officials determine should not be removed. Arizona, 567 U.S. at 408. “This is not the system Congress created.” Id.

Congress has put in place a system in which state officers may not make warrantless arrests of aliens based on possible removability except in specific, limited circumstances. Id. at 410, citing Hines v. Davidowitz, 312 U.S. 52, 67 (1941). In Hines, the Court noted that an important consideration in assessing the unconstitutionality of the state’s exercise of authority in that case was that the “legislation deals with the rights, liberties, and personal freedoms of human beings, and is in an entirely different category from state tax statutes or state pure food laws regulating the labels on cans.” Id. at 68. Clearly, the instant case deals with the rights, liberties and personal freedoms of human beings, putting it into a category of higher scrutiny.

The Fifth Circuit acknowledges that “absent express direction or authorization by federal statute or federal officials, state and local law enforcement officers may not detain or arrest an individual solely based on known or suspected civil violations of federal immigration law,” City of El Cenizo, 890 F.3d at 189. (citing *Santos v. It is clear that the OLS process of unilateral detention “based solely on reasonable suspicion or knowledge that a person was unlawfully present in the United States” is a violation of the Fourth Amendment. In the case sub judice, it is clear that the OLS process of unilateral detention “based solely on reasonable suspicion or knowledge that a person was unlawfully present in the United States” is a violation of the Fourth Amendment. In the case sub judice, Plaintiff Martinez was “located and detained” as a “migrant.” (emphasis added). He was arrested, along with five others, on the Union Pacific Railway. The probable cause affidavits for these Plaintiffs reflect detention and arrest based upon immigration status.

b) False Probable Cause Affidavits

Under the Fourth Amendment, “a fair and reliable determination of probable cause” must be provided “as a condition for any significant pretrial restraint of liberty.” Baker v. McCollan, 443 U.S. 137, 142 (1979). “The Fourth Amendment is the appropriate constitutional basis for [a person’s] claim that he was wrongfully arrested due to the knowing or reckless misstatements and omissions in [probable cause] affidavits.” Winfrey v. Rogers, 901 F.3d 483, 492 (5th Cir. 2018). Fourth amendment rights are violated if (1) the affiant, in support of the warrant, includes a false statement knowingly and intentionally, or with reckless disregard for the truth and (2) the allegedly false statement is necessary to the finding of probable cause. Id. at 494.

2. Sixth Amendment Violations

The Sixth Amendment provides that “[i]n all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right ... to have the Assistance of Counsel for his defense.” In McNeil v. Wisconsin, 501 U.S. 171, 111 S.Ct. 2204, 115 L.Ed.2d 158 (1991), the Supreme Court explained that the right arises when a person is charged, at a preliminary hearing, at an indictment, or arraignment.” Id., at 175, 111 S.Ct. 2204 (citations and internal quotation marks omitted). Plaintiffs and Class Members have been deliberately denied their Sixth Amendment right to counsel through failure to advise them of such right; refusal to allow them to contact counsel; and/or being forced to waive such right. These violations of their constitutional rights were deliberate and ongoing. As pleaded, individuals, including Plaintiffs, are, and have been, deprived of counsel at critical stages that deprived them of the ability to obtain a bond reduction or make any change in their bond status, obtain an earlier release, to file any motions, obtain any discovery and/or information to support their defenses or to obtain any timely proceedings. “The [Supreme] Court has held that ‘critical stages’ include the pretrial type of arraignment where certain rights may be sacrificed or lost, Hamilton v. Alabama, 368 U.S. 52, 54, 82 S.Ct. 157, 158—159, 7 L.Ed.2d 114 (1961), see White v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 59, 83 S.Ct. 1050, 10 L.Ed.2d 193 (1963), and the pretrial lineup, United States v. Wade, supra; Gilbert v. California, supra. Cf. Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 86 S.Ct. 1602, 16 L.Ed.2d 694 (1966), where the Court held that the privilege against compulsory self-incrimination includes a right to counsel at a pretrial custodial interrogation. See also Massiah v. United States, 377 U.S. 201, 84 S.Ct. 1199, 12 L.Ed.2d 246 (1964).” Coleman v. Alabama, 399 U.S. 1, 7, 90 S. Ct. 1999, 2002, 26 L. Ed. 2d 387 (1970). The Coleman Court specifically found that bail hearings were “critical stages.” Id. “There can really be no question that an initial bail hearing should be considered a critical stage of trial. See Higazy v. Templeton, 505 F.3d 161, 172 (2d Cir. 2007) (“a bail hearing is a critical stage of the State’s criminal process”) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted); Caliste, 329 F.Supp.3d at 314 (“the issue of pretrial detention is an issue of significant consequence for the accused”).” Booth v. Galveston Cnty., 352 F. Supp. 3d 718, 738 (S.D. Tex. 2019).

3. Due Process Violations

To prove a substantive due process claim, a plaintiff must show the challenged government action is arbitrary, unreasonable, or has no relationship to a legitimate government interest. or has no relationship to a legitimate government interest. Brantley v. Kuntz, 98 F. Supp. 3d 884, 889 (W.D. Tex. 2015), citing Simi Inv. Co. v. Harris Cnty., Tex., 236 F.3d 240, 249 (5th Cir.2000) (stating government action comports with substantive due process if “rationally related to a legitimate government interest” and impinges upon it if “arbitrary or capricious”). The federal statutory structure instructs when it is appropriate to arrest an alien during the removal process. For example, the Attorney General can exercise discretion to issue a warrant for an alien’s arrest and detention “pending a decision on whether the alien is to be removed from the United States.” Arizona v. United States, 567 U.S. 387, 407, 132 S. Ct. 2492, 2505, 183 L. Ed. 2d 351 (2012). And if an alien is ordered removed after a hearing, the Attorney General will issue a warrant. See 8 CFR § 241.2(a)(1). In both instances, the warrants are executed by federal officers who have received training in the enforcement of immigration law. See §§ 241.2(b), 287.5(e)(3). OLS violates the Plaintiffs’ substantive due process rights under the Fourteenth Amendment because the law is arbitrary and capricious and, because the federal scheme is enacted to address immigration enforcement, serves no legitimate government interest.

4. Equal Protection Violations

In Arizona, the Supreme Court noted the “constitutional safeguards” that applied to immigration enforcement, including that officers “may not consider race, color or national origin” in implementing its laws. 567 U.S. at 411. The Equal Protection Clause was intended as a restriction on state legislative action inconsistent with elemental constitutional premises. “Thus we have treated as presumptively invidious those classifications that disadvantage a ‘suspect class.’” Plyler v. Doe, 457 U.S. 202, 216–17, 102 S. Ct. 2382, 2394–95, 72 L. Ed. 2d 786 (1982). “Everyone accepts that a detention based on race, even one otherwise authorized by law, violates the Fourteenth Amendment’s Equal Protection Clause.” Nieves v. Bartlett, 139 S. Ct. 1715, 1731, 204 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2019). The Constitution “prohibits selective enforcement of the law based on considerations such as race.” Whren v. United States, 517 U.S. 806, 813, 116 S. Ct. 1769, 1774, 135 L. Ed. 2d 89 (1996).

The implementation of the OLS system has resulted in systemic discrimination on the basis of color, race and/or national origin. Arrests under OLS are severely racially disparate: the overwhelming majority (if not all) arrests are of Black and Brown men. Trespass arrest affidavits authored by DPS troopers reveal these racial disparities and also show clear indications of profiling based on race and national origin. The ACLU completed an initial analysis in approximately December 2021 of DPS trooper affidavits providing arresting officers’ accounts of 168 arrests—96 in Kinney County. The affidavits demonstrated stark racial disparities in arrests: all arrests were of people of color, and almost all were of Latino men. 98% were recorded as “H/M” (Hispanic male) and 2% as “B/M” (Black male). For Kinney County, of the 96 arrest affidavits analyzed, 33% described country of origin and/or perceived immigration status: 29% included perceived immigration status, and 8% included country of origin. (These totals for each category equaled more than 100% because some narratives included for example, both perceived race and perceived immigration status.). As specifically described in Plaintiffs’ complaint, the descriptions in the affidavits’ arrest narratives strongly indicated racial profiling beyond the bare statistics. The affidavits suggested that the individual’s perceived ethnicity was relevant to the DPS trooper’s understanding that that person was not welcome on the property. Other affidavits also describe observing, and then arresting, Latino men. Arrest narratives also strongly indicated profiling on the basis of national origin, including perceived immigration status. Many arrest narratives described observing “undocumented migrants.” Others are described in detail in Plaintiffs’ complaint. On February 23, 2022, the ACLU supplemented its written complaint with analysis of an additional 316 trespass arrests affidavits —277 from arrests in Kinney County. 100% of the arrests in Kinney County were recorded as “H/M” (Hispanic male). Almost always, the descriptions from arresting officers imply that individuals’ perceived immigration status was relevant to the decision to initiate law enforcement action or to arrest:

In Arizona, the Supreme Court noted the “constitutional safeguards” that applied to immigration enforcement, including that officers “may not consider race, color or national origin” in implementing its laws. 567 U.S. at 411. The Equal Protection Clause was intended as a restriction on state legislative action inconsistent with elemental constitutional premises. “Thus we have treated as presumptively invidious those classifications that disadvantage a ‘suspect class.’” Plyler v. Doe, 457 U.S. 202, 216–17, 102 S. Ct. 2382, 2394–95, 72 L. Ed. 2d 786 (1982).

“Everyone accepts that a detention based on race, even one otherwise authorized by law, violates the Fourteenth Amendment's Equal Protection Clause.” Nieves v. Bartlett, 139 S. Ct. 1715, 1731, 204 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2019) (emphasis in original). The Constitution “prohibits selective enforcement of the law based on considerations such as race.” Whren v. United States, 517 U.S. 806, 813, 116 S. Ct. 1769, 1774, 135 L. Ed. 2d 89 (1996).

The implementation of the OLS system has resulted in systemic discrimination on the basis of color, race and/or national origin. Arrests under OLS are severely racially disparate: the overwhelming majority (if not all) arrests are of Black and Brown men. The affidavits demonstrated stark racial disparities in arrests: all arrests were of people of color, and almost all were of Latino men. 98% were recorded as “H/M” (Hispanic male) and 2% as “B/M” (Black male). Beyond these bare statistics, the descriptions in the affidavits’ arrest narratives strongly indicated racial profiling.

Plaintiffs have absolutely alleged that they were specifically targeted based upon race, national origin and immigration status. There is no question that they are being treated differently than white people and/or citizens as they are undisputedly targeted based upon race and immigration status. The Defendant undisputedly have set up an entirely separate criminal system for prosecuting immigrants which white people and citizens are not subject to enduring. This case can be distinguished from Jornaleros de Las Palmas v. City of League City, 945 F. Supp. 2d 779, 801 (S.D. Tex. 2013) because in that case, the court determined that the plaintiffs were “not targeted based on who they were, but on what they did—that is, exercise their right to free speech.” In this case, Plaintiffs were targeted based on race, national origin and immigration status, constituting a violation of the equal protection law.

5. § 1983 Conspiracy

“To state a claim for conspiracy under § 1983, a plaintiff must allege the existence of (1) an agreement to do an illegal act and (2) an actual constitutional deprivation.” Whisenant v. City of Haltom, 106 F. App'x 915, 917 (5th Cir. 2004) (per curiam) (citing Cinel v. Connick, 15 F.3d 1338, 1343 (5th Cir. 1994)). In the instant case, the agreement between Abbott, McCraw and Coe to engage in “immigration enforcement” is clear and on record. It is also clear that they agreed to implement the OLS immigration enforcement without the involvement of the Federal Government and based upon observed race/color and/or immigration status in violation of the United States Constitution. This agreement to implement OLS in such a manner resulted in violations of the constitutional rights of Plaintiffs and the Class Members. The rights in question were clearly established at the time that OLS was implemented and the actions taken in concert with such agreement/implementation were objectively unreasonable.

6. § 1985 Conspiracy

To state a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3), a plaintiff must allege: (1) a conspiracy involving two or more persons; (2) for the purpose of depriving, directly or indirectly, a person or class of persons of the equal protection of the laws; and (3) an act in furtherance of the conspiracy; (4) which causes injury to a person or property, or a deprivation of any right or privilege of a citizen of the United States. In so doing, the plaintiff must show that the conspiracy was motivated by a class-based animus. The conspiracy between Abbott, McCraw and Coe (and others) to implement OLS was specifically for the purpose of depriving a class of persons of the equal protection of the laws. It is clear that arresting and incarcerating someone on the basis of their race/color and/or immigration status is a violation of equal protection. Defendants acted in furtherance of the conspiracy by implementing OLS in the manner that directly resulted in the injuries to Plaintiffs and the Class Members described herein. Thus, Defendants are liable pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1985.

7. Individual Capacity

Governor Abbott makes no bones about his OLS system. His written and verbally acknowledged policy is to arrest people based on their immigration status, and to do it without federal assistance, authority or intervention. He takes personal credit/responsibility for thousands of such arrests made at his specific direction. Arrests based upon skin color, race and/or possible removability violate the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution. Abbott's OLS system is the direct and moving force behind the unconstitutional arrests and incarceration of the Plaintiffs and the Class Members. Furthermore, Abbott is aware of the requirements of 8 U.S.C. § 1357, "Power of immigration officers and employees," which requires state and local officers to work in conjunction with the Federal Government as immigration officers and requires specific training. Abbott has consciously and deliberately chosen to violate these requirements and deliberately chosen not to train state officers with respect to the constitutional implications of arresting persons based on race, skin color and/or immigration status. This lack of training and failure of supervision is the direct and moving force of the violations of the rights of the named Plaintiffs and the Class Members. If the officers directed by Abbott were trained to follow federal immigration law and policies, including constitutional restraints relating to probable cause and equal protection, they would not be making arrests based upon color/race and/or immigration status. Thus, Abbott is not entitled to qualified immunity.

FOR THE REASONS STATED, Plaintiffs pray that Defendant's Motion to Dismiss be denied, and for such further relief as justice may require.
